The Douro Wine Region

The Douro Wine Region (DDR) is located in Northeast Portugal, in the Douro River basin, surrounded by craggy mountains that give it very particular soil and climacteric characteristics. It is one of the oldest (since 1756) demarcated wine regions (Douro Demarcated Region-DDR), spreads over a total area of approximately 250000 hectares, with almost 43,000 hectares being occupied by different vineyards' systems.

In 2001, UNESCO classified 24,600 hectares of RDD (along the banks of Douro river and its tributaries) as a world heritage site as an evolving cultural landscape of outstanding beauty that is at the same time reflection of its technological, social, and economic evolution.

The DDR produces two designations of origin, the fortified Porto and Douro (still) wines, with completely different market trajectories. Port wine has been on the international market for around three centuries, while the Douro is a new entrant of around three decades and a more recent public recognition. In addition, structured around the Douro River (cruises between Oporto and the Spanish border) and the link to wine tourism, the Douro has witnessed strong growth in recent years and is today endowed with excellent tourist amenities.

How to get Vila Real

Traveling from the city of Porto:

If you are arriving by plane, the closest airport is Porto International Airport. The city of Vila Real is about 100 km from Porto.

By bus

At the airport, take the subway to Campo 24 de Agosto Bus Central Station. Then catch the E Purple Line towards Trindade Station and get off at Lapa Station (14 stops), where you will switch to A Blue Line direction Estádio do Dragão and get off at 24 Agosto Station (3 stops). The journey takes approximately 42 minutes. Check available bus connections here <https://www.rede-expressos.pt/> (the journey lasts between 1h15 and 1h45, depending on the bus).

By car

You can rent a car at the airport and take highway A4 to Vila Real. It takes approximately 1hour of driving.

By train

At the airport, take the subway to São Bento Train Station. Then catch the E Purple Line to Trindade Station (15 stops), where you will change to D Yellow Line direction Santo Ovídio and get off at São Bento Station (2 stops). The journey takes about 40 minutes. From there, catch the direct IR (Inter-Regional) train to Peso da Régua (2 hours journey). For train tickets and times, check the train's company site <https://www.cp.pt/passageiros/en/buy-tickets>; from Porto-São Bento to Peso da Régua). Once you arrive at Peso da Régua, catch a taxi to Vila Real (approximately 25 minutes).

Where to stay/Hotels

See (e.g. booking.com) hotels in Vila Real and neighborhoods. Further information will be provided.
